Letters on Police Maladministration. Spiritualism, and Other Matters.

The recent charge of Judge Wylle in the 'detective trial" has drawn the attention of all good citizens to the state of our criminal law governing this offense. No lawyer needs to be told that Judge Esek Cowen was, in his day, a master of juris-

In the third volume of Hill (New York Reparts) is found a case so nearly like the Metropolitan bank robbery that the opinion of Judge Cowen therein might have been quoted almost entire in charging the jury in the latter; and it is difficult to resist the con-clusion that the result of the trial might have been different had that distinguished judge been more closely followed.

The case was this: The Frederick County bank of Maryland was robbed May 22, 1841, of notes and bonds exceeding in value $125,000. The thieves fled with the property $125,000. The thieves fled with the property to the city of New York, and there connected with one Wiley, who hold the office of police justice of the city of New York. On the 16th of June, 18i1, this man Wiley wrote to the cashier of the bank (one Doyle), saying that if the agents of the bank could have a personal interview with him he had no doubt he could arrange matters in a manner that would be satisfactory by a restitution of the loss. In answer to this letter agents were sent to New York to negotiate with Wiley, with full power to act on the basis of the letter. After much negotiation the business was consummated by the bank recovering was consummated by the bank recovering from Wiley the sum of $122,619, and paying him 8 per cent. thereon, or the sum of $5,909.52, as his reward.

It must be taken in consideration that this community will not tolerate the gross impositions that have been perpetrated on some of the good citizens of this district in violation of good citizens of this district in violation of the rules laid down in the police department manual and the laws of this country, there-fore a reform is demanded, and that in the shortest time possible. FORESTRY EXPERIMENT STATION.

To the Editor. In your issue of Saturday a writer proposes that congress shall appropriate a part of the Arlington property to be used, under the direction of the commissioner of agriculture, as a test farm or an agricultural experiment station. I had already thought of Arlington station. I had already thought of Arlington as a proper place for an experimental forestry station, a place in which to form a model forest plantation and test the greatest variety of trees, so as to ascertain the best mode of management, their adaptations to different soils, their special characteristics, &c. One of the first needs, now that we are beginning to see the importance of the forests, for something besides a supply of lumber, and are feeling the need of tree planting on a large scale, and in many parts of the country, is an experiment station where the greatest variety of trees may be planted and tested. Hardly anything would be more useful to the country. The growth of trees being comparatively slow and experiments in regard to their management requirments in regard to their management requirments in regard to their management requiring considerable time, individual enterprise will be reluctant to engage in the work. It is peculiarly a work to be undertaken by governmental authority for the common welfare. It is much to be desired that we should have several such stations in different parts of the country. It would be well if every state would establish one for itself. But there certainly should be one such contral there certainly should be one such central station for the whole country, a model, if you please, for others.

While, therefore, I approve the suggestion of your correspondent, I would offer an amendment that the Arlington properly be appropriated for the combined use of an agricultural and forestal experiment station under the direction of the commissioner of agriculture, or such direction as congress may

WASHINGTON, April 16. LOCATION OF THE RAILROADS.

To the Eillian. It is not to be expected that congressmen should be interested to any very great degree in the welfare of the District of Columbia, as in the welfare of the District of Columbia, as state matters occupy most of their time, and for that reason the location of the railroads is a question very apt to be neglected.

I have watched, with great interest, this question, and now that congress seems willing to consider the matter, the opinions of these interested should be made known.

If this article moots the eye of a congressman let him consider to whom this will be a benefit. Evidently to those who are injured by the present location of the railroads. Who are they? First, it is generally conceded that the Baltimore and Ohio must be removed from its present vicinity to the capitol.

moved from its present vicinity to the capitol. Next, the people most injured are the inhabitants of East and South Washington, which itants of East and South Washington, which is evidenced by their carnest efforts in agitating this subject both in the courts and legislature. The people of the northern and western section of the city are not interested. Then what follows? This: That the opinions and desires of the people of East and South Washington should be respected. If the opinion of the people of South Washington is inquired into it will be found to be unanimous almost in favor of the plan which proposes K street south as the street on which the depot should be located. This plan is by far the best of all that have been proposed. No tunneling under the capital grounds is to No tunneling under the capital grounds is to be allowed, but the two roads to meet outside

IMPROVING GREAT RIVERS.

To the Editor The courteous suggestion of Capt. I. P., Walker, in a recently published letter, that some "further quotation from and discussion of or comment upon Mr. Ellet's ideas by 'M.,' or anyone taking an interest in the question," would be acceptable to himself and possibly to the public seems to require some acknowl. the public seems to require some acknowledgment

Unhappily, neither "M." nor any one particularly interested in the question of Mr. Eilet's connection with the reservoir plan and his claim to be considered its author is compe-tent to adequately present or discuss his views. An equal difficulty attends the se-lection of such passages from his works as would within the narrow compass of one or two newspaper articles fairly illustrate his Ideas.

The plan for improving great rivers by means of artificial reservoirs to be constructed upon their headwaters was conceived, and the writer thinks demonstrated, by Mr. Ellet more than thirty years ago in his work on "The Mississippi and Ohio Rivers," now a very rare book, but to be found in the congressional library, and probably in the war department and the Smithsonian institution. A conv of it can also be seen at a private department and the Smithsonian institution.

A copy of it can also be seen at a private house in this city, to be ascertained at the office of THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN.
The only hope of the writer of this and of a previous article has been to protest against the oblivion which, from the time of his death in the accomplishment of a remarkable naval victory, due to his professional skill and personal courage, has seemed to be almost intentionally drawn around the memory of the author of the reservoir plan and inven-tor of the steam ram, the late Charles Ellet, jr., civil engineer. Polo on Bicycles. The second of a series of polo matches on bicycles between Rex Smith and Will Robertson, a comparative novice in bicycle riding, took place Saturday evening at the Star bicycle school, which resulted in a victory for Robertson. The conditions of the game were that the first one to send the ball through his goal five times should be the winner. Robert

This is the second match which Robertson, who is a comparative novice in the game, has won in succession from Smith, who has become somewhat cele-brated as a rider. Polo by bicycles is a comparatively new game, and is exciting. The ball is driven one way or the other by striking it with the small wheel of the bicycle, making necessary some very rapid and risky move-ments of the riders. Last Friday Mesars.
